New to the club?

Just turn up on a Tuesday evening — there is no need to book, and your first few visits are free. Bring nothing but yourself; we have the boards, sets and clocks.

Ask us a question

League chess

We enter teams across the divisions of the Coventry & District League, plus a side in the Leamington League. If you fancy competitive play, there is a board for you at whatever standard you are.

Junior section

Our junior section runs every Tuesday, 4:30pm at St Oswald's Church Hall, Tile Hill, Coventry — a separate venue from the main club night. Places fill up very quickly and must be booked in advance, so please check with us before attending. Sessions are £5 per session.

Enquire about juniors

Where to find us

We meet at Massey Ferguson Social Club on Banner Lane, Coventry, which kindly provides our venue every week. There is parking on site and a bar.

POSITION 28 July 2026

Club night puzzle: a rook ending worth knowing

RE Rhys Edwards

POSITION

White to move

White to play and draw. There is exactly one move that holds.

Show the answer

FEN

Copy

Open in the lichess analysis board →

Rook endings are where league points are quietly won and lost. Most club players know roughly how to push a passed pawn, and almost nobody has looked at what to do when the defence is a single well-placed rook.

Try the position above before reading the answer. White is a pawn down against a rook and a king, and there is precisely one move that saves the half point.

Why this one matters

It is not an artificial study. Positions of this shape — one pawn, one rook each side, kings close — turn up several times a season in the Coventry League, usually at about half past ten when everybody is tired. Knowing the rule saves you the trouble of finding it at the board.

The rule to remember

With a rook against a pawn on the seventh, get your rook as far away as the board allows along the file, so it can check from behind without being caught. Short-side checks fail; long-side checks hold.

Practise it

Set the position up with a club mate and play both sides. Then move the pawn to c2, and to a2, and see which of them changes the assessment. That half hour will be worth more to your grade than a new opening line.

If you want to work through endgames systematically, the free lichess practice lessons cover this material well, and our coaching page explains how to arrange one-to-one sessions.

NEWS 20 October 2025

How to improve at chess

SW Simon Weaver
Club administrator

Improving at chess is less mysterious than it looks. Almost everyone who gets meaningfully better does the same handful of things, and almost everyone who plateaus is skipping one of them. Here is the advice our stronger players give most often.

Get the fundamentals right first

Before anything clever, make sure the basics are automatic: develop your pieces towards the centre, castle early, do not move the same piece repeatedly in the opening, and do not bring the queen out to be chased. The Opera House Game on this site is seventeen moves of exactly this point being proved.

Study tactics, regularly and in small doses

Tactics decide club games. Learn to spot the recurring patterns until you see them without looking:

- Pins — a piece that cannot move without exposing something more valuable
- Skewers — the same idea, with the valuable piece in front
- Discovered attacks — moving one piece to unleash another
- Forks — one piece attacking two targets, the knight's speciality

Fifteen minutes of puzzles a day beats three hours once a fortnight. The lichess puzzle trainer is free and adjusts to your level.

Build a small opening repertoire and understand it

You need far less opening knowledge than you think, but you need to understand what you do know. Pick one reply as White and one against each of 1.e4 and 1.d4, and learn the resulting positions — where the pieces belong, which pawn structures arise, what the typical plans are. The Italian Game is a good starting point for White because the ideas are clear and the structures repeat.

Memorising twenty moves of a line you do not understand is worse than useless, because you will be lost on move twenty-one.

Learn to play the middlegame with a plan

Once the pieces are out, ask three questions: which of my pieces is worst placed and how do I improve it; where are the weak squares in my opponent's position; and which side of the board should I be playing on. A mediocre plan followed consistently beats a series of individually reasonable moves with no plan behind them.

Take endgames seriously

This is the biggest single source of dropped points at club level. Start with:

- King and pawn against king — the opposition, and which squares matter
- Rook endings — the most common ending in practice, and the least understood
- Basic mates — king and queen, king and rook, delivered without thinking

There is a rook ending puzzle on the site that shows the sort of thing worth knowing cold.

Learn from your own games, especially the losses

Go through every league game you lose. Not with an engine first — do it yourself, write down where you think it went wrong, and then check. The recurring mistakes are the ones worth fixing, and you will only find them by looking at your own games rather than grandmaster ones.

Do not neglect the mental side

Calculate concretely rather than hoping. Practise visualising two or three moves ahead without touching the pieces. And learn to sit on your hands when you find a good move: spend thirty more seconds checking it is not refuted.

Play stronger opponents in a real club

Online blitz is entertaining and it will not make you much better. Long games against stronger opposition, over the board, with the post-mortem afterwards, will. That is precisely what a club night is for — and the conversation at the bar after the game is often where the most instructive chess of the evening happens.

Stay curious

Read about the game. Follow a tournament. Look at the games of a player whose style appeals to you. The people who improve most are usually the ones who simply find chess interesting, and keep turning up.

New to the club? We meet every Tuesday at the Massey Ferguson Social Club from 7:30pm — just come along, or send us a message first if you prefer. Our junior section runs on Tuesday afternoons at St Oswald's Church Hall, Tile Hill, and one-to-one coaching is available for both adults and juniors.

Fixtures

Last updated 13 August 2026

Our season runs from early October through to the following May, with the Summer Cup filling the weeks after the league programme finishes. Club nights are every Tuesday at the Massey Ferguson Social Club from 7:30pm, whether or not a match is scheduled.

League fixtures

Full fixture lists and up-to-date results for both leagues we play in are published by the leagues themselves:

- Coventry & District Chess League — fixtures, tables and news
- Coventry League results on the ECF LMS — match cards as they are submitted
- Leamington & District Chess League — our Division 4 side

The season at a glance

Period	What is on
Early October	Season opens; league matches begin
December	First half of the league season closes; club nights continue for social chess
January	League matches resume
March	Club rapidplay tournament, then the Summer Cup begins
April – May	Summer Cup rounds, with a free week over Easter
May	Club AGM (members only)
June	League AGM

Exact dates are announced on the club blog as each part of the season is confirmed, so that is the place to check before travelling to a match.

Home matches

Home fixtures are played at the Massey Ferguson Social Club, Banner Lane, Coventry, CV5 7NL. Please note that the entrance is on Broad Lane. There is parking on site and a bar. Visiting teams are always welcome — please arrive for a 7:30pm start.

Juniors

Last updated 13 August 2026

Our Junior section is every Tuesday starting at 4:30pm, costs £5 per session, and is held at St Oswald's Church Hall, Tile Hill — a different venue from our main club night. Spots for this session fill up very quickly and must be pre-booked, so please check with us before attending.

Sessions coach young players from the basic moves through to their first competitive games.

Please note: the junior session is at St Oswald's Church Hall, Tile Hill, not at the Massey Ferguson Social Club where the main club night is held.*

What a junior session looks like

Sessions mix short teaching, puzzles and played games. Beginners start with how the pieces move, basic checkmates and simple tactics; more experienced juniors work on openings, endgame technique and playing with a clock in preparation for graded events.

Safeguarding

The club takes safeguarding seriously. We have a safeguarding policy and a code of conduct that all juniors, parents and coaches are asked to read, and coaches working with our junior section are appropriately checked. Please ask on a club night, or through the contact page, for copies of:

- the junior chess calendar
- the code of conduct
- the safeguarding policy
- the waiting list form

Parents are welcome to stay for sessions.

Moving up to club and league chess

Juniors who are ready are welcome to come along to the main club night at the Massey Ferguson Social Club and, in time, to play in league matches — several of our league players came up through the junior section. One-to-one coaching is also available for juniors who want to push on faster.

A word to parents

Chess is unusually good at rewarding patience and concentration, and it is one of the few competitive activities where a nine-year-old and a seventy-year-old can have a genuinely close game. No equipment is needed — we provide the boards, sets and clocks.

🕒 Hide the answer

1. Rd8! and White draws. The rook goes as far away as possible along the file so it can check the king from behind without ever being trapped. If instead 1. Rd2? then 1...Kc3 wins, and 1. Rd3+? Kc4 followed by ...Kb4 also loses. The technique is called the "rook on the long side" and it is worth learning properly.

Coming along on a Tuesday

Message *

I played a fair bit at school and for my university team, and I have started playing online again during the winter. I would like to get back to playing over the board with a clock. Would it be alright to come along on a Tuesday evening and have a few games? I am free most weeks after seven.

If you are asking about the junior section, it helps to mention the child's age and any experience they already have.

Thank you for contacting Coventry Chess Club

From Coventry Chess Club <no-reply@coventrychessclub.co.uk>
To Priya Raman <priya.raman@example.com>

Coventry Chess Club

Hi Priya Raman

Thank you for your interest in Coventry Chess Club.

We have League and Social matches every Tuesday from 7:30pm at Massey Ferguson Social Club, Banner Lane, Coventry, CV5 7NL. Entrance on Broad Lane.

We have six teams in the Coventry & District chess league, plus a number of players who play friendlies.

Our Junior section is every Tuesday, 4:30pm and only £5 per session and is held at St Oswald's Church Hall, Tile Hill, Coventry (spots for this session fill up very quickly and must be pre-booked, so please check with us before attending).

If you wish to visit us and have a few games of chess, you are very welcome to come to the club on a Tuesday evening.

Private tuition is also available for a fee if required, from our two fully qualified trainers.

For any further information you require, do feel free to telephone either of us:

- Chairman, Dave Filer — 024 7641 1719
- Club Secretary, Simon Weaver — 01455 221297

We also have a Facebook group here: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/coventrychessclub> — which again you are welcome to join.

If you do decide to come down to the club, it may be best if you telephone one of us beforehand and then we can make sure someone will keep an eye out for you on arrival and introduce you to other club members.

Kind Regards,

Simon Weaver

Club Secretary
